THESE ARE OUR RIGHTS

FT is as well to remember, when Russin raves about the "war psychosis of the West," just what all the fuss is about, and just what are our rights in Berlin.

Western rights in Berlin from "the total defeat and unconditional surrender of Germany," as Britain, the United States and France have repeatedly stressed to Russia.

In the summer of 1945, shortly after the fighting ended, four-Power agreements were reached dividing Berlin into zones and establishing a Council "whose Control decisions shall be unanimous," in the words of the agreement.

Air corridors

FIGHE Control Council, it was agreed, "will ensure appropriate uniformity of action by the commandersin-chief in their respective zones of occupation and will reach agreed decisions affecting Germany as a whole."

Under the agreements, traffic by road, rail, and air from West Germany through East Germany to Berlin proceeds along prescribed routes.

General Collins tells of Communist capability

Washington, Sept. 7. General James Collins, Commander-in-Chief of the U.S. Army in the Pacific, said today that although nuclear war in Asia was unlikely, the possibility of it must be considered.

The General said in an address. to the Association of the U.S. Army here that the Chinese-Soviet bloc was capable of nonnuclear, tactical nuclear and massive nuclear attacks.

The U.S. could therefore maintain peace and deter aggression in the Asian area by having similar capabilities.

"Korea, Dien Bien Phu and Lnos are facts that diminish the credibility of massive nuclear retaliation as a deterrent to non-nuclear aggression in Asia," General Collins went on.

The Olympic Village is to be and special highways will link it with the various arenas. However, there is still much doubt about how this will really work out, and it is feared that athletes will have to spend as much as four hours a day just travelling -and in conditions which must be seen to be believed. Some writers have quite seriously suggested that the Japanese as a people are not temperamentally sulted handle anything more complicated than a wheelbarrow on the roads. And even when you're not on a road here, you still don't have much chance as the tale of a suburban furniture

As Prince Rainier and Princess Grace of Monaco arrived in Athens aboard the yacht "Cristina" with its owner, Mr Aristotle Onassis, the Greek ship-owner, and Greek opera soprano, Maria Callas, it was once again rumoured that this was a wedding trip. But Mr Onassis denied that he had married Callas.

"All I can tell you," he said, "is that Miss Callas and I are close friends; we have seen a lot of each other in the last year. "But I cannot discuss any marriage plans."

The party of four visited the Hill of Philopappus, facing the Acropolis: with Mr Onassis, but without Callas, who remained aboard. There was nothing to the play except the spade finesse and that worked for him. I was asked just how wise or foolish the five-spade bid was. The enswer is that it was a very good bid. East and West were good players and their bidding had clearly shown that they held two aces only and that they were both long in the red suits. Hence, North was marked with two aces (probably the black ones) and plenty of black eards with them, George had no reason to expect to make his contract, but he certainly was not going to be hurt and he was defending against a sure heart game,

David Jones has tough schedule

David Jones, Britain's most successful sprinter, will certainly spend the six months after the 1962 Empire Games in Australia.

This will mean the rejection of an athletics scholarship in America which is in the wind; a tentative approach has been made by Dan Ferris, himself the father-figure of American athletics.

*1 understand, however, that Castrol, Jones's firm, are arranging for him to be temporarily transferred to Australia after be has competed next year at Perth, This will enable him to run all through the next English season up to and including the Empire Games, then to take part in the Australian season and after that to return and go on running through the English summer.

Johns is an unusually powerful young man, but eighteen months' hard running-which this would entail-is surely too much for any sprinter. If it doesn't tax him physically it can hardly fail to have a psychological effect. I wonder if he's

New professionals?

Is the New Deal in Soccer going to bring the New Professional? I have my doubts — we're such a class-ridden nation - but there are one or two promising signs.

For example, Paddy Walsh, the Oxford University and Pegasus right-half, who has now gone to Corinthian-Cusuals, via Southall and Hothslow, will be playing mid-week reserve team football this season for Brentford. The invitation was extended, and accepted, when he applied to Brentford for permission to train at Griffin Park.

Walsh, a medical student at Charing Cross Hospital, finds

Seconds out

In reply to Mr T. N. Wow's second letter, may I observe that although ideals are learned and acquired by human experience, they must necessarily transcend human experience and remain hypothetical and abstract, because they presuppose a standard of perfection impossible to realise in the actual world. However, their validity is not affected by the question of practicality, as they are based upon the imaginative interpretation of human experience, and only directly deal with imagined realities. The practical value of an ideal lies in its partial realisation, but an ideal is an ideal only when we consider its theoretical value.

Mr Wow conceives the ideals as I define them as "a form of human behaviour," a concept that is obviously fallacious. When an ideal expresses itself as a form of human behaviour. It must adapt itself to its physical conditions, and its standard of perfection is automatically impaired.

Science, like philosophy, is but a systematisation of speculations, but the difference is science, in formulating its speculations, always presupposes that they can be testified (if not now, then in the future) by physical evidence, whereas the same is not necessarily true of philosophy. For example, the conquest of space is scientifically conceivable; the ideal of "the world as one family" is certainly not scientifically concelvable, but it is philosophically concelvable.

Analysis is "a resolution of anyinto its clements." But original elements, or fundamental values are unanalysable. "Expression" is analysable as a form of human behaviour. but "the freedom of expression" is unanalysable because it interprets human behaviour in terms of fundamental values. It may be analysable so long as it is a qualified kind of freedom, i.e. it is a freedom conditioned by concrete realities and rendered into a particularised value; but "the freedom of expression" in the ultimate sense is unanalysable. Try to analyse "the freedom of expression" without concretising and particularising it, Mr Wow. Concrete Illustrations are always more persuasive than vague generalisations.

Self-Govt

When 10 dedicated persons are willing to fast 12 hours to achieve reform in the Government the time has come to study the problem in its true perspective, and though Victor Mamak is himself a dedicated man whose principies are against an extension of the present Government system, his making fun at serious minded persons is deplored.

Representation by the people is the only form of true Government. In Hongkong there is a certain amount of autocracy, oligarchy and bureaucratic government. Even Government recognises this evil and in some cases, (Oh, so very seldom) seek advice of the people such as the Society of Architects, kaifongs, the Civic and Reform Associations but advice which is given and not heeded is about the most fullie waste of any management.

The UK Government and HM the Queen are examples of the British system prevailing in England. Why cannot this system of allegiance to the Crown with the Crown subjected to Parliament work for Hongkong too. What is really needed in Hongkong is representation by districts with representatives elected by the public. We may be small
